Unique Aspects of Ethiopia

Aspect	Description
High Women's Parliamentary Representation	Ethiopia stands out in Africa with one of the highest proportions of women in parliament, boasting over 38%. In 2018, the country even had a gender-balanced cabinet for a brief period, highlighting its dedication to promoting gender equality in politics.
First Female President in 2018	Sahle-Work Zewde made history as Ethiopia's first female head of state, marking a significant step forward for women in national leadership — a topic that often comes up in UNCSW discussions.
National Gender Policy Implementation	Ethiopia has rolled out a number of national policies aimed at promoting gender equality, such as the National Gender Equality Strategy for 2021 to 2025, which aligns with the goals of SDG 5.
Female Genital Mutilation (FGM) Eradication Campaigns	Ethiopia has been working hard to implement legal reforms and enhance public health initiatives aimed at reducing the prevalence of female genital mutilation (FGM) — a key focus in the fight against harmful practices.
Strong CSO Engagement	Civil society organizations in Ethiopia, such as the Ethiopian Women Lawyers Association (EWLA), are crucial in promoting women's rights, which is essential for the themes discussed at the Commission on the Status of Women (CSW).
Focus on Education for Girls	Ethiopia has made great strides in getting more girls into primary education and is actively pursuing gender equality in secondary schools—an important topic in the discussions at CSW.

Programs for Ending Child Marriage	Ethiopia stands out as one of the key countries in the UNFPA-UNICEF Global Programme aimed at ending child marriage, which is a significant focus for the Commission on the Status of Women (CSW).
Legal Frameworks Against GBV	Reforms have been introduced to make domestic violence and sexual abuse criminal offenses, in line with the CSW's focus on gender-based violence.
Post-Conflict Gender Inclusion	In the wake of the Tigray conflict and other regional tensions, Ethiopia is under pressure to boost women's involvement in peacebuilding and transitional justice efforts. This aligns with the themes of the Commission on the Status of Women (CSW) focusing on Women, Peace, and Security.
Participation in CSW Dialogues	Ethiopia has been actively participating in the CSW sessions, such as CSW65 and CSW67, sharing insights from the perspective of a Global South and least-developed country (LDC).
Women's Economic Empowerment Focus	National strategies are all about enhancing women's access to land, finance, and entrepreneurship—this is a key focus during CSW sessions.
Intersectionality in Gender Policy	Ethiopian gender frameworks are starting to take into account the differences that come from ethnicity, religion, and whether someone lives in a rural or urban area. This shift aligns with the evolving perspective of the Commission on the Status of Women (CSW) on intersectional gender justice.
Commitment to SDGs and Agenda 2063	Ethiopia's gender policy beautifully weaves together the UN Sustainable Development Goals and the AU's Agenda 2063, showcasing a strong alignment with both regional and global initiatives.
Youth and Adolescent Girls Inclusion	Ethiopia, with its vibrant youth population, places a strong emphasis on the importance of adolescent girls in driving development and promoting gender equality—aligning perfectly with the youth inclusion goals set by the CSW.
UN Partnership on Gender Projects	Ethiopia is teaming up with UN Women, UNFPA, and UNESCO to focus on development initiatives that center around women. This collaboration stands out as a significant example of international partnerships aimed at promoting gender equality.
