Aspect	Description
Technological Empowerment of Women	Japan is making great strides in promoting women's leadership in fields like STEM, AI, and innovation. During CSW67, the country highlighted its commitment to gender digital equity and its support for women entrepreneurs in the tech industry.
Strong Private Sector Partnership Model	Japan is really pushing for public-private partnerships to boost gender equality. They're teaming up with big corporations to enhance the gender balance in executive positions, all under initiatives like "30% by 2020" and the Gender Equality Bureau.
Global Champion on Gender in Disaster Risk Reduction (DRR)	Japan, drawing from its experiences with natural disasters like the 2011 tsunami, places a strong emphasis on understanding how gender impacts disaster preparedness and recovery, particularly in small island developing states and other developing nations.
Economic Security Through Women's	Japan tends to view gender equality as a key factor in boosting economic security and fostering national growth. The country promotes policies aimed at increasing women's participation in the workforce, especially as a way to address the challenges posed by an aging population.

Workforce Inclusion
Emphasis on Aging Society and Elderly Women	Japan, known for having one of the oldest populations in the world, places a special emphasis on the rights and well-being of elderly women. This includes important issues like pensions, access to healthcare, and gender policies that consider the needs of all ages.
Gender Equality within Cultural Tradition	Japan leverages the UNCSW to express how traditional values, such as wa (harmony), can harmonize with gender reform. They skillfully navigate the delicate balance between embracing modernization and honoring their heritage.
Pioneer in Women's Political Leadership Metrics	Japan is making bold moves to boost the number of women in national politics, often pointing to its low ranking as a key reason for pushing for reforms and changes in legislation.
Official Development Assistance (ODA) with Gender Focus	Japan plays a significant role as a donor for gender-focused initiatives in Asia and Africa, often showcasing its efforts at the Commission on the Status of Women (CSW). The country supports programs aimed at women's education, reproductive health, and combating violence against women through the Japan International Cooperation Agency (JICA).
Gender-Based Violence (GBV) Legislation and Policy	Japan is making strides to bolster its laws against sexual harassment and domestic violence, particularly in light of international attention. The country is working to ensure that its national actions are in line with CEDAW and CSW resolutions.
Tokyo as a Hub for Gender Innovation	Japan is actively promoting Tokyo's initiatives on parental leave, childcare support, and work-life balance at the municipal level. This effort highlights how reforms at the city level can effectively contribute to achieving national gender equality.
