Unique Aspects of Oman at UNCSW

Aspect	Description
Active Participation in UNCSW Sessions	Oman has been a regular participant in the UNCSW sessions, including the 67th and 69th gatherings, showcasing its dedication to discussions on global gender equality.
Advancements in Women's Education	Significant strides have been made in women's education in Oman, with a 97.7% female enrollment rate in 2024 and a 66% participation rate in higher education in 2023.
Promotion of Women in STEM Fields	Representatives such as Mariah Al Hinai have highlighted how crucial it is to boost women's involvement in science and engineering during the UNCSW sessions.
Legal Reforms Supporting Women's Rights	Oman has introduced new laws designed to safeguard women's rights and ensure their protection, in line with international agreements such as CEDAW.
Omani Women's Association (OWA)	Since its inception in 1970, the OWA has played a crucial role in championing the educational and professional rights of women, effectively kicking off the women's movement in Oman.
Challenges in Political Representation	Even though Oman has made some strides, the number of women in political roles is still quite disappointing, with just 2.3% of parliamentary seats occupied by women as of 2020.

Cultural and Legal Barriers

Women in Oman encounter various challenges, including unequal inheritance rights and restrictions on passing their nationality to their children. These issues clearly point to areas that are in dire need of reform.
